Split your class in half and give pinnies for one team to wear.

The team wearing the pinnies will be “it”. They are to align down the centre of the gym with one person facing one direction while the person beside them faces the other.

Continue to alternate until all of the team has been used up.

Ask all of them to kneel down on one knee. One student will start the game off as the tagger on the same side as the other team who are not wearing pinnies.

To start the game, the teacher will yell “go”. All students without the pinnies must cross to the other half of the gym without being tagged. The tagger cannot cross to the other side. When all students have reached the other side, the tagger must tag a kneeling team mate who is facing the direction of where the other team went to. The person who is tagged becomes the next tagger while the previous person who was the tagger replaces that person on the centre line. If you are tagged, you go to a designated spot in the gym and wait there until the game is over.

The game is over when all the students who were not “it” at the beginning of the game get tagged.
